Factory Exodus to Delay Draft of Dads

HERSHEY SEES PRESSURE ON 18-25 GROUP

Director Says Public Opinion Forcing Youths Into Military Service.

LOWER STANDARD DUE

Job and Physical Disability Called Only Grounds For Deferments.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—The pressure of public opinion pushing youths from draft-deferred factory jobs into military service is a factor today in determining when fathers must be drafted.

Selective Service Director Lewis B. Hershey officially recognized this factor in the manpower problem by pointing out that drafting of fathers, originally expected about July 1, may be delayed if youths from 18 to 25 are driven from draft-deferred jobs by social pressure.

Saying that he did not believe fathers would be drafted before July 1, Hershey told reporters at a press conference last night:

"I still don't know just when we will have to take them. For instance, I don't know how soon men of 18 and 19 years of age, the 20, 21 or 25-year-olds will be driven out of the factories by public opinion. If I knew this I might be able to tell you."

Both Hershey and War Manpower Chief Paul V. McNutt have stressed that the time has come when physical requirements must be lowered, fathers drafted or the draft age maximum raised.

"There are only two reasonable grounds for deferment," Hershey said. "Either the government doesn't want a man, or the government wants him somewhere else."

He explained that occupation or physical disqualifications were the only reasonable grounds.

Possibility that fathers may be given an extension of time came to light as the house military affairs committee opened hearings on the Austin-Wadsworth national

City, County Schools Gain By New Bill

Proposal's Okay By Ohio House Would Bring Richland $56,000.

Described as the "administration's answer to the school problem" the Page bill as approved by the Ohio house of representatives last night, would provide an additional $56,000 annually for Mansfield and Richland county schools.

The school bill, passed by the house, 111 to 7, is awaiting action by the senate. The measure includes recommendations made by a survey commission appointed by the legislature in 1941.

If enacted into law, it would give Mansfield schools approximately $35,000 more annually and the county schools, about $21,000 more. Annual state allocations now under the foundation law total about $400,000 for city and county schools.

The new proposal would increase the allocation from 25 cents to 29 cents per day for each elementary pupil, the basis on which state funds are allocated for the period from September, 1943, to December, 1944. That represents an increase of $7.20 annually per pupil.

There are 4,110 grade pupils in Mansfield schools and 2,943 in the county school exclusive of Shelby. Included in the allocation to Mansfield schools would be $4,200 to reimburse the Mansfield board of education for expenditures for special schools for handicapped pupils.

School interests have been clamoring for more funds from the state to meet increasing operating costs. In Mansfield, Supt. W. L. Miller said the additional funds which would be provided under the bill would be "welcomed" to help the schools keep out of the red.

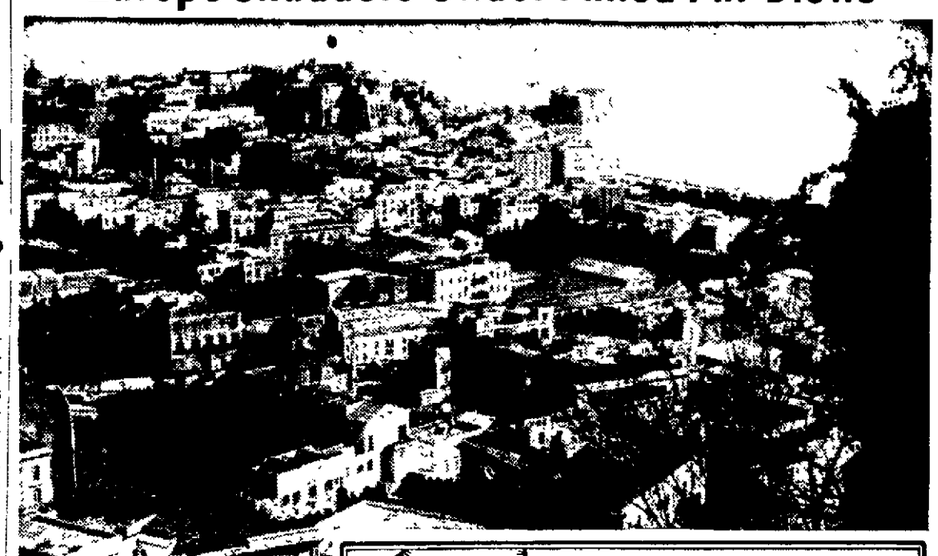
Other principal points covered by the school bill are

Establishing a state equalization fund to help school districts pay debts and make essential building repairs, and

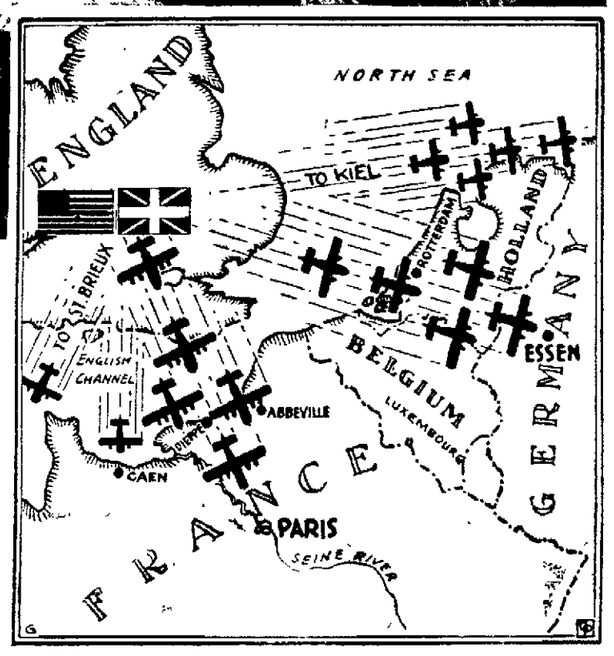
Authorizing schools temporarily to release pupils 16 or older for work in war industries and on farms.

The house rejected, 59 to 57, an amendment to prohibit university board of trustees from promulgating regulations "on the basis of race, religion or creed." The sponsor was Chester K. Gillespie, Negro representative of Cleveland.

Europe Shudders Under Allied Air Blows



While Europe shuddered under continuous Allied air blows the port of Naples, shown in the top photo, took a particularly severe blasting from 100 U. S. Flying Fortresses which pounded the harbor area sinking and damaging many Axis merchant ships. This raid was followed at dusk Sunday by a heavy onslaught of U. S. Liberator bombers which hit oil storage facilities. The map below shows areas of northern Europe that have been under steady pounding by heavy forces of RAF and American bombers.



ASHLAND YOUTH DIES IN CRASH

Ronald Garretson Killed as Car Hits Pole on Route 60, South of City.

ASHLAND—Ronald C. Garretson, 21, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Garretson, was instantly killed last night when his automobile struck a utility pole on State Route 60, three miles south of Ashland.

Death was caused by a skull fracture, Acting Coroner Dr. Wayne Smith reported.

Garretson was alone in the car at the time of the accident, according to state highway patrolmen. He was thrown from the vehicle after it struck the pole.

Highway patrolmen said the youth was operating the car illegally, his driving license having been suspended in February in Ashland police court after he had been arrested for driving 100 miles per hour.

Garretson was graduated from Ashland high school and Culver Military Academy. He had been employed at the Garretson Lumber company of which his father is president.

Surviving besides his parents are one sister, Anne, at home, and his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Garretson of Ashland.

Funeral services will be conducted Thursday at 2:30 p. m. at the home by Rev. H. E. Andrews, pastor of First Presbyterian church. Burial will be in Ashland cemetery.

Liquor Ration Bill Passes, Quota's About Pint A Month

BULLETIN

COLUMBUS—(AP)—Gov. John W. Bricker said today he would sign Ohio's liquor rationing bill as soon as it reaches him—possibly Thursday—and at the same time Liquor Director Don Fisher indicated rationing would become effective about mid-May.

Finishing touches were being applied to a state-wide liquor rationing system in Columbus today, with prospect that the limit per person would be something under a quart a month.

The liquor rationing bill, which empowers the state liquor director to install a rationing system, was passed by the state senate last night, 27 to 1. It had previously passed the house.

State Liquor Director Donald A. Fisher would not say when rationing would begin, the Associated Press reported, nor would he predict the amount that would be allowed. He did say that state liquor stores likely would be closed for a brief period before the system is inaugurated.

Fisher also said that about 1,200,000 quarts of liquor would be available monthly through the state's retail stores, and a similar amount would be allotted to the state's taverns.

Statisticians began the speculation which led to an estimate of not more than a quart, and probably nearer a pint, as a per capita ration per month.

If only one person in six residing in the state obtained a ration card—or about 1,200,000 of the state's 7,000,000 population, the allotment would be a quart a month.

But in Virginia, where ration-

HE'S HOPEFUL

Steelman Sees Chance For Accord on Mine Wages.

NEW YORK—(UP)—Dr. John R. Steelman, U. S. conciliation service director, was hopeful today that mine operators and union representatives will reach an agreement on a new contract for 450,000 bituminous miners without taking the wage controversy before the war labor board.

Steelman said there was "no complete deadlock" and believed the operators from the Northern and Southern Appalachian fields and the United Mine Workers will compromise their difficulties before the extended negotiations expire April 30.

The miners are seeking a $2 a day wage increase, inclusion of 50,000 minor bosses under the contract, and pay rates based on a "portal-to portal" basis, which would include the time it takes the miner to enter and leave the pits.

BROWN ALMOST GETS SUBPENA FROM SENATE

Arrives at Hearing Just In Time, Wickard Gets a Tongue-Lashing.

SMITH HITS REFUSAL

Denounces Administration Leaders For Failure To Appear at Session.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—Price Administrator Prentiss Brown, whose supposed ability to get along well with congress was one reason for his appointment, almost had a subpena slapped on him today by a group of his former colleagues of the senate.

The trouble finally was straightened out, however, when Brown appeared before the senate agriculture committee somewhat tardily, and the committee in turn agreed to postpone the hearing to which he had been invited.

The hearing had been scheduled for 10 a. m. on the Pace bill to include farm labor costs in computing parity. Brown, Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard, and newly-appointed Food Administrator Chester C. Davis were, according to the committee's advance notices, supposed to testify.

None of the trio was present at 10 or 10:30. Brown arrived a few minutes before 11. After a little discussion with him, the committee decided to postpone the hearing until Thursday.

When the committee convened with no witnesses present, Chairman Ellison D. (Cotton Ed) Smith, D., S. C., wrathfully denounced Brown and Wickard for "practically" refusing to appear.

Davis, he explained, had begged off on grounds that he was new on the job and still unfamiliar with conditions. That was okay with Smith. The committee went into executive session to consider Smith's request for issuance of a subpena for Brown.

Brown's Aides said A. M. Shaw, executive assistant, telephoned Smith's secretary yesterday and asked that Brown's appearance be postponed until Thursday because

ONE MORE DAY

Car Owners Get Until Tomorrow To Obtain Stickers.

The latest deadline for Ohio motorists to obtain 1943 automobile windshield stickers, signifying payment of 1943 license fees, is Wednesday midnight.

Harold E. Sulbert, assistant state registrar of motor vehicles, said today at Columbus that he would notify all police departments and the state highway patrol to arrest motorists driving with out windshield stickers after midnight April 7. Culbert said there would be no further extension.

Sales at the Richland County Auto club are 15 per cent below 1942 level, Deputy Registrar Jack Berger announced yesterday. Berger said the decline was probably due to the fact that many motorist have decided to store their cars for the duration. He also said that some motorists were probably "pinched" by income tax payments and were delaying purchase for this reason.

13 Other Nazi Planes Downed In Big Battle

BULLETIN

(By United Press)

The London radio said today that numerous British warships had left Gibraltar, their destination unknown. The broadcast said the battleships Nelson, Malaya and Rodney, the aircraft carrier Formidable and other warships were at Gibraltar early last week and most of them now have departed.

(By Associated Press)

Cannon-firing U. S. fighter planes have sent 18 big Nazi air transports crashing into the sea and knocked down 13 other enemy planes off the coast of Tunisia in one of the greatest air battles ever seen in the North African theater, dispatches from Allied headquarters declared today.

In addition, United Nations airmen blew up an Axis destroyer and rained fiery destruction among ships of a convoy en route to the Tunisian front.

Other at-a-glance developments in the global conflict:

RUSSIA—Soviet artillery pounds "big center of German resistance" in Caucasus, possibly Novorossisk naval base; Red armies crush new German attacks on Kharkov front, capture stronghold in drive on Staraya Russa.

AIR WAR—RAF Middle East bombers smash Naples anew, rekindle fires set by 100-plane U. S. Flying Fortress assault. Germans list 221 killed, 385 injured in American raid on Antwerp; Nazis also declare 300 killed, 700 injured in U. S. attack on Renault works near Paris.

American fliers pounced on the huge fighter-escorted armada of German Junkers 52 transports over the Sicilian straits, about 25 miles north of Tunisia, and in a 25-minute battle sent plane after plane spinning into the sea.

Pilots said flames which burst from the transports when they hit the waters indicated they were carrying gasoline or oil for Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's tanks and air force.

One pilot described the enemy planes as looking "like a swarm of locusts," flying in a giant v-formation about 50 feet off the water.

Meanwhile, Nazi broadcasts rang a series of alarms on the Tunisian campaign, reporting that British Eighth army guns had started bombarding Rommell's defense zone along the Wadi El Akarit, 20 miles north of Gabes, and that reinforced American troops "seem to be preparing for a major operation."

The Germans also reported Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery was moving his tanks up to the front in preparation for an assault.

General nervousness over the Tunisian campaign was reflected

POUNDED: 10 Jap Bases Feel Weight Of Allied Bombing Raid

(By Associated Press)

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters announced today Allied warplanes pounded at least 10 Japanese bases in sweeps over the islands above Australia, but the enemy continued to mass warships and merchant vessels in the vicinity of Kavieng despite a violent three-day pounding.

Kavieng is a port in New Ireland, immediately above the big Japanese base at Rabaul, New Britain.

Seven enemy warships and five cargo vessels previously had been sunk or severely damaged in the Kavieng raids. Reconnaissance yesterday, however, disclosed the enemy had returned to the area. A light Japanese cruiser, probably one of those hit Sunday, was reported washed up on the beach.

Meanwhile, General MacArthur's bombers struck in a three-hour assault on the Japanese base at Buka island, at the northern tip of the Solomons, and attacked enemy targets in Dutch New Guinea, New Britain and New Guinea.

Allied airmen said they also scored near misses with 500-pound bombs on a 4,000-ton Japanese cargo ship at Sekar bay, in Dutch New Guinea.

On the Burma front, British headquarters said RAF heavy bombers dropped 1,000-pound bombs on the central railway station at Japanese-occupied Rangoon, setting fires visible for 60 miles, while RAF Hurricans broke up a raid by more than 50 Japanese planes in the vicinity of Maungdaw in western Burma.

At least 11 of the enemy raiders were crippled in a series of dogfights, the British said.

Imperial Tokyo headquarters asserted Japanese planes had destroyed 38 Allied aircraft in eastern India between April 1 and 4 and had sunk or heavily damaged 10 Allied vessels.

WORSE: Allied Ship Losses Greater As Sub War Steps Up

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—Secretary Knox said today Allied ship losses in the Atlantic were considerably worse in March than in February, due to intensified operations of German submarines.

February was one of the best months of the war to date, and Knox's comment was not regarded as indicating a new peak in sinkings had been reached, but simply that the battle of the Atlantic had taken a turn for the worse.

The secretary gave no estimate of the total number of U-boats the Nazis have thrown into their spring offensive, but he said that "just as we expected and as I said it would be, there are more German subs out there."

"They've changed their tactics more or less," he added, without disclosing what new tactics had been observed. "The situation is serious and a tough one. Nobody is a bit complacent about it."

The U-boats are concentrating in the middle Atlantic, the secretary said, along the shipping routes from the United States to England and to the Mediterranean.

To counter the U-boat offensive the United States is rushing construction of fleets of destroyer escort ships, and Knox was asked whether there had been any improvement in the escort program.

He replied the rate of launchings was very good and a lack of engines to put into the hulls was being overcome.

Bolivia Prepares To Declare War As Wallace Pays Call

LA PAZ, Bolivia—(AP)—A swift Bolivian declaration of war on the Axis powers was forecast today as the nation greeted Vice President Henry A. Wallace with the most spectacular demonstration of western hemisphere solidarity he has encountered during his tour of Central and South America.

In a surprise move the Bolivian defense council, of which President Enrique Penaranda himself is a member, recommended yesterday to the chief executive that the nation "advance toward a state of war."

Foreign Minister Tomas Manuel Elio said this meant the president and his cabinet probably would issue a declaration of a state of war, call for immediate mobilization of the army, and convoke congress for a formal declaration.

Crowds broke through police lines to throw flowers at the vice president as the enthusiastic reception of his tour of Latin-American countries continued.

The indictments were returned on March 30 but not made public until today.

PUZZLED OVER FINDING BABY

Dr. J. H. Harris, who examined the baby later at the hospital, said the child had had excellent care up until his abandonment and was not even hungry on arrival at the hospital.

New London Mourns Its First War Casualty, Army Lieutenant

While additional details of the death of Ensign Preston R. Sprunger, 27, Mansfield navy pilot, were revealed today, the War department announced the death of Lieut. Jedd C. Wood, 27, New London's first casualty of the war.

Ensign Sprunger lost his life last Saturday when his plane landed in heavy seas and was swamped off the coast of Washington, it was revealed by the 13th Naval District headquarters in Seattle.

The navy pilot's father, Noah Sprunger, 460 Marion avenue, was advised yesterday of his son's death, but he received no details of the tragedy. Funeral services and burial will be in Wadsworth, his former home.

Death of Lieut. Wood of New London on the North African battlefront had been reported today to his sister, Mrs. D. M. Weekley of New London. He was an artillery officer.

Lieut. Wood enlisted in March, 1941, and was sent overseas last October.

Native of New London, he was graduated from the high school there in 1934. His widow, the former Elizabeth Lutz of New London, four sisters and one brother survive.

by German or German-controlled radio broadcasts, which said American troops under Lieut.-Gen. George S. Patton, jr., were being constantly reinforced in the Maknassy and El Guetar sectors and were evidently preparing to strike.

Latest reports, however, said Rommel had still managed to keep open a 40-mile gap between the Americans at El Guetar and the British Eighth army on the coast.

A Moroccan broadcast, heard in London, said French troops operating with Lieut.-Gen. K. A. N. Anderson's British First army in northern Tunisia had captured a village 19 miles west of Mateur in a drive toward the big German-held naval base at Bizerte.

Mateur lies 18 miles southwest of Bizerte.

The Berlin radio said Eighth army artillery was laying down "test shots" on Rommel's new defense lines and declared the movement of British tanks indicated "an attack against Rommel's positions will now not be very long in coming."

The concerned tone of Axis broadcasts, all stressing Allied offensive maneuvers, suggested the Nazis were preparing the German people for more bad news on the critical struggle in North Africa.

A communique from Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's headquarters announced Allied patrols were "active in all sectors" of the 250-mile battle line but said there were no major engagements on land.

In the skies, the communique said, Allied warplanes kept up their terrific assault on Axis airdromes, shipping, railways, troops concentrations and other targets.

The London admiralty announced light British warships prowling off the Tunisian coast sank an Axis supply ship and probably sank another in an attack on a strongly escorted three-ship convoy ferrying vital war materials to Rommel's army.

On the Russian front, Adolf Hitler's long and bitter struggle for the old riches of the Causasus appeared to be nearing its end today as the Red armies scored new gains against the last German footholds along the Black sea.

The Russian command said big Soviet guns were blasting a major center of German resistance and had knocked out more than 60 Nazi firing points. The objective was not specified, but the Russians disclosed three days ago they were hammering at the gates of Novorossisk, Black sea naval fortress, and an early communique today told of hand-to-hand fighting as the Red army shoved deeper into the Nazi fortified zone.

Other Soviet forces were driving the Germans back against the Kerch strait farther north, pushing through salt marshes and swamps in the closing phases of a sweep to throw the Nazis back across the strait to the Crimea.

In aerial warfare, Germany and occupied Europe apparently were given a respite after 72 hours of devastating assault by Allied warplanes, while Axis broadcasts listed a total of 521 persons killed and more than 1,085 injured in yesterday's American raid on Antwerp and Sunday's attack by U. S. planes on the Renault armament works near Paris.

Yanks Return From 'Suicide' Attacks

CAIRO—(U.P.)—Three volunteer American crews flying Liberator bombers carried out projected "suicide" attacks on Axis Mediterranean bases last Friday, but all returned safely, ninth air force headquarters announced today.

The raids made at extremely low altitude were against Italian bases at Messina (Sicily), San Giovanni and Crotone (Italy).

Heavy fighter opposition was encountered, but anti-aircraft fire was sporadic.

Messina and San Giovanni are key supply ports for the Axis forces in Tunisia. Crotone also is a port on the sole of the Italian boot.

he had an important staff meeting this morning with persons from out-of-town. Smith's secretary agreed to transmit the request to his chief and advise Shaw, according to this version.

Not having heard by this morning, Shaw telephoned Smith's secretary again and reiterated the request. That, according to the OPA version, was the last Brown or Shaw knew of the incident until about 10:30 a. m. then Sen. Burton K. Wheeler, D., Mont., a member of Smith's committee, telephoned Brown and told him he'd better get to the Capitol—quick.

When Brown arrived, Wheeler informed him that several committee members felt the three administrative agency heads were deliberately seeking to avoid appearance before the senate committee. Brown assured the committee that he had no such intention.

"We all know that the OPA has been subjected to a lot of criticism in congress," Brown said. "I have been doing everything in my power to erase that feeling and bring about a spirit of wholesome co-operation."

Brown told of Shaw's telephone calls, and referred to delays in the mails that brought him the committee's invitation. He said it took him "half an hour to get a telephone call through" to answer the letter.

"It sometimes takes me two days to get a telephone call through from this end." Wheeler interposed. "You've got the rottenest telephone service of any agency in Washington. Maybe you need an efficiency expert."

"Brown said he had "a lot of" efficiency experts in OPA.

"Then maybe you've got too many," Wheeler replied.

FINDS OWNERS FOR MACHINERY

County Agent Combines Farm Sale With War Bond Campaign.

COLUMBUS —(AP)— Efforts of Preble county's agricultural agent W. H. Bruner to redistribute usable farm machinery where it will do the most good recently resulted in ownership changes for 142 pieces of equipment and in the sale of $1,152 worth of war stamps and bonds.

Bruner reports to the agricultural extension service that a farm equipment sale attended by a crowd of 300 served a three-fold purpose: It put usable machinery into the hands of farmers who needed it, relegated unusable pieces to the junkyard to be broken up into scrap, and helped the sale of war bonds and stamps.

Fifty-nine farmers consigned miscellaneous pieces of farm equipment—all of which they did not intend to use in their own operations this year—to be sold for a total which reached $1,547.50, and they immediately invested $1,152 of their earnings in war securities.

Sale articles included practically all kinds of horsedrawn tools, a threshing machine, chick brooders, and a cream separator. One binder brought $150, a mowing machine $75, and the threshing machine $50.

Hershey's statement that physical disqualifications and the essentialities of one's occupation would be considered the only legitimate grounds for deferment put the manpoyer situation in a somewhat different light than the prediction of McNutt who said that enough labor would be found to plant, cultivate and harvest this year's crops. McNutt said the army and the war food administration's land army would assist in providing outside help in spotty areas.

"You've got to get men where you can," declared Hershey. "The time is coming when the draft age, maximum, now 37, must be raised or physical qualifications lowered."

Men aged 38 through 44 must either work in essential activities or fight, President Roosevelt indicated in a memorandum a week ago.

Liquor Ration Bill Passes, Quota's About Pint A Month

ing is in effect, more than a third of the state's population registered. If a third of Ohio's population, or about 2,300,000, should obtain ration cards, the quota would come down to a pint a month, on the basis of a supply of 1,200,000 quarts monthly.

Meanwhile, state tax examiners were ordered to assist the liquor department in preventing tavern "stooges" from buying liquor at state stores for resale to retail outlets.

With officials agreeing that "stooge" buying had cut deeply into scanty liquor stocks now available, State Tax Commissioner William S. Evatt directed the investigation by the 210 tax examiners of the state. Evatt said his department had a definite stake in the liquor situation because of the three per cent sales tax on liquor sold by the drink. No check on sales is available when permitholders buy liquor at retail stores, he explained.

He added that tax examiners obtained from the liquor department the volume of purchases of each permitholder through wholesale liquor stores. This is checked against the operator's previous inventory, with a retail price markup of about 100 per cent allowed for sales by the drink. The examiners also check the number of cancelled sales tax stamps the permit holder has purchased.

EX-CHIEF DIES

Millerand, Former President of France, Succumbs at 84.

LONDON—(AP)—The Berlin radio, in a broadcast recorded by the Associated Press, reported Alexandre Millerand, president of the French Republic, from 1920-1924, died today at Versailles, at the age of 84.

Millerand lived in comparative obscurity in his later years but he was one of the first of the French elder statesmen to sound a warning against the growing might of Germany after Adolf Hitler came to power.

In an address Feb. 20, 1935 he publicly proclaimed the necessity of a two-year army conscription term against "the German menace." Decrying France's low birth rate he declared "there seems no other way out."

VICTORIAN MEMBERS HEAR OF RED CROSS

Mrs. D. N. Roller Presents Topic at Victorian Club Meeting; Mrs. Mark Wolcott, Maple Street, Hostess at Luncheon.

MRS. D. N. ROLLER, a member of the Richland County Red Cross Speakers' Bureau, was guest speaker, Monday afternoon at the luncheon meeting of the Victorian club, held at the home of Mrs. Mark Wolcott, Maple street. Mrs. Roller's topic was "The Work of the Red Cross."

When luncheon was served, guests were seated at a long table attractively appointed in white. An arrangement of white sweet peas centered the table.

At the close of the business meeting, Mrs. John Finefrock announced the officers chosen for the ensuing year. They are: president, Mrs. W. M. Layton; vice president, Miss Lois MacKellar, and secretary and treasurer, Mrs. Dwight Weir.

In her talk, Mrs. Roller said that the story of the Red Cross is one of great achievement. This great agency of mercy owes its beginning to Henri Du Nant, a humanitarian, residing in Switzerland. After witnessing painful and distressing scenes on Italian battlefields, in the Italian-Austrian war of 1859, he conceived a plan for relieving the suffering caused by war and disaster.

Because of his great interest and untiring promotion of this idea, Mrs. Roller went on, a committee of five men, three leading doctors of Switzerland, a Swiss general and Mr. Du Nant, met the following year in Geneva, to find a way to put this plan into action. A treaty was formed which was, as time went on, signed by every civilized country on earth.

We find ourselves breathless, Mrs Roller declared, as we consider the immensity of the work of the American Red Cross. We see near us, Mansfield's great field of activity, which includes production service, nutrition and campaign division, nurses aids, home nurses, nurses' recruiting service, blood donors' unit, motor corps, first aid training, home service, service of disaster relief, new work of camp and hospital, and staff assistants' work.

From the work of the well trained staff assistants, who give hours every day in the effort of local chapters to those who serve, in the international offices in Geneva we find the links in a chain of service that has a spirit of cooperation, resignation of self, and devotion to others that cannot be found elsewhere.

General MacArthur has expressed his appreciation for the Red Cross in these words, "when tragedy interrupts, as sooner or later it must succor for the injured, the helpless, the destitute, speeds by land, by sea, by air. No call, no matter how great or small passes unheeded. The Red Cross never fails a soldier.

It brings to him a hint of home, a touch of cheer, whether he be in teeming jungle or Arctic waste. It bears a gift to him from no one, and yet from all. It warms him with the comfort that someone thinks of him, and that someone prays for him. It truly follows in the train of the Prince of Peace.

Post Nuptial Shower Honors Mrs. Griebling

Hostesses at a miscellaneous shower Friday night, for Mrs. Robert Griebling, the former Miss Janet Gadfield, were the Misses Eloise and Sleanor Piper, and Juanita Oswalt, at the former's home, 466 North Mulberry street.

Bridge was played at three tables, during the evening. Prizes were won by the Misses Meta Clelland, and Eleanor Laver and the honoree.

Mrs. Glynn Bethea poured, when luncheon was served buffet style, late in the evening. The hostesses used pink and white as their color scheme. Pink roses, in a lovely arrangement, comprised the centerpiece. Each guest was presented with a corsage of pink and white sweet peas.

A doll, to which a ribbon was attached led to the various gifts of Mrs Griebling.

Guests who were present included Mrs. Harold Teeter, Mrs. Earl Swigart. Mrs Bethea, and the Misses Betty Blackstone, Dorothy Moore, Thora Ruckman, Eileen Smith, Elaine Crall, Miss McClelland, Miss Laver, the hostesses and the honoree.

HOROSCOPE

For Wednesday, April 7.

A promising day for activity and progress in the launching of important projects is read from predominant lunar and mutual aspects. It will be found that those in influential positions will be ready to cooperate substantially, with funds. There may be dangerous intrigues to be alert to.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of opportunity for putting over some cherished plans with the support of those in financial position to contribute both funds and wise counsel. This might be endangered by impetuosity, or other immoderate conduct. Also there is a menace from subtle sources, snares, intrigues or malicious enmity. Guard against these, demonstrate ability and merit, and all should prosper and be happy.

If It Is Your Birthday.

A child born on this day should have much ability and ambition, together with popularity with higher-ups anud influential friends. But it may be impulsive, petulant and extravagant, and also easily imposed upon.

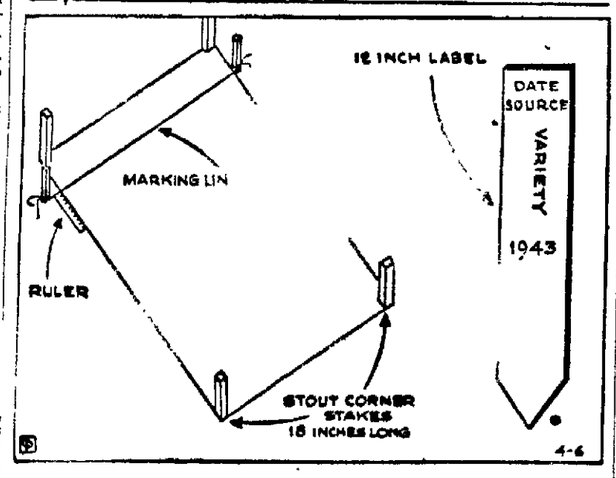
Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH



Laying Out a Victory Vegetable Garden.

By DEAN HALLIDAY
Released by Central Press Ass'n.

Neatness in the Victory garden is essential. Tools also should be kept clean. Dirty tools are evidence of a lazy gardener. Clean tools can do more work and faster.

A great deal of equipment is not necessary for a Victory garden, but before undertaking to plant seeds or set out plants, gather together four stout stakes, each 18 inches long. These should be used to mark the four corners of the garden plot. A ruler also is necessary, to measure the space between the rows. Rows should be regular and properly spaced, therefore a ruler is essential. The garden line is also an essential piece of equipment. For this purpose nothing is better than a heavy, tightly twisted cord such as that used on window shades. The use of the corner stakes and stakes to hold the line marking the rows is shown in the accompanying Garden-Graph.

As each garden row is planted it should be labeled. Twelve-inch label stakes, as illustrated, are most practical. At the top of the label put the planting date, below the source of supply of seed, under this the variety (lengthwise) and below that the year. Such information will prove of real value when next year's garden is planned and one wants to refer to the harvest results of this year's plantings.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

"Ah, yes," my father said, smiling a bit grimly. "I only saw the end of it—and its effect. Suppose you tell me the whole thing from the beginning."

I obeyed him, and he listened attentively.

"A performance which not only did credit to the actress, but to the playwright," he said, with a bow toward me.

"Unfortunately," I said, "I cannot claim much credit. "Mary improvised most cleverly and improved my original conception."

"Nevertheless," my father said, "the plan certainly succeeded. Georges in the hideaway will have beautiful memories of Olina to contrast with unpleasant ones of Mary, which will be good for him, and Noel, with Mary's cajolery, will forgive and forget her crass exhibition, while he would be sorely troubled by any romantic attention Georges might lavish on her."

"And now, Richard," he said "I haven't had a chance to ask you before about your trip up with Carolyn."

Trip With Carolyn.

"It was absolutely uneventful" Dicky answered. "Poor kid! I really felt sorry for her, as I never thought I could toward that brat. She clung to Ronald all through the trip, and I could hear him assuring his sister that he would trust her. When they parted she broke into sobs and I heard her say 'I will tell you everything, Ron, just as soon as I dare'."

"That means, I think," my father began judicially, "that all danger from Carolyn is over. Of course she feels she cannot tell now the secret she is hiding because of her terror lest Marion suffer.

"Well, we can leave Carolyn in college for a while, carefully guarded, of course, so that no visitor can harm her, and anyone who sees her will be trailed.

"A little later, Margaret, I shall have to turn Carolyn over to you. I think you may be able to show her that her best way of helping Marion will be to let us know that secret."

With a hidden shiver of dismay I wondered if my father realized how difficult a task he had just outlined for me so calmly.

"That experience must have taxed Ronald terribly," he said.

"It did," Dicky replied quickly. "He didn't make any comment, hardly spoke ten words on the trip down, but when I left him at the Underwoods he looked drained and exhausted."

"We won't keep you any longer, then," my father said decidedly. "Let me know early in the morning how he's bearing up, and if there's anything I can do."

"I'll do that sir" Dicky said as he left, and my father looked at me inquiringly.

"Mary will be ready for that accident early this morning?"

"Yes. I'm to go to their apartment at 8 o'clock," I said.

MAKE IT IMPOSSIBLE

Any good defender of a No Trump contract, when he knows his partner has one or more established low cards in some suit, will exert himself to the limit to unblock in other suits, so that his partner may regain the lead and cash the setting tricks. A canny declarer, however, should use every device he can find to make such moves impossible, and keep the dangerous hand out of the lead.

East led the heart 5 to the Q and A, and the heart J came back. North ducking and then winning the third heart with his K. Then he went to work on the clubs, leading the 6 to the K and A. West picked diamonds as his best chance to give East the lead, using his 7, which drew the 10, J and A. Now came the club Q from dummy. If West had played low, he would have had to win the next club and could not have put East in soon enough to do any good. But he played his J on the Q, and the third club then was won by East with the 10, whereupon two hearts put North down two tricks.

North could have nullified that defensive effort, in fact making it impossible to even try. Upon winning the third heart and leading the club 6, he should have finessed the 8 or 9. West would have won with the J, but his side could have taken nothing thereafter except his own club A, as the club K-Q, remaining in the dummy, would have blocked East from ever getting the lead. By this means, North would have made his contract air-tight, so long as West had the club A, with only three hearts.

Sport Podge

by REX HESS

Mansfield's greatest gridder of all time, Wilbur (Pete) Henry, athletic director and head football coach at Washington and Jefferson where he gained the fame that has rated him as an all-time All-American tackle, still regards Jim Thorpe as the greatest football player of them all.

Interviewed by Arthur Daley of the New York Times during the national invitational basketball tournament recently, Henry said of the Indian who played with him on the Canton Bulldogs, now recuperating from a heart attack: "Jim could do everything superbly well."

"We used to choose up sides for kicking games in the middle of the week. You had to kick from where you caught the ball. Jim would wait until we were backed up to the goal line and then he'd punt all the way to the other goal line. I've seen him kick 90 and 100 yards at a clip. He was a good passer in days when they tossed few forwards. Throwing the ball 50 or 60 yards was easy for him. No one could block or run the way he could.

In his prime he needed no interference. He'd just twist those nimble hips of his and tacklers would go down like ten pins hit by a bowling ball.

"The closest thing to weakness he had was his pass defense. If he thought the receiver could get the ball, that man never had a chance. But if he thought the ball was overthrown, he wouldn't bother to cover. Jim was always saving Jim, you know. He hated practice and often would go coon hunting instead. Often he didn't even know the signals. That didn't matter much in his prime but when he got older he needed help.

"But how he enjoyed the game in his early years! I can still hear that deep-throated laugh of his as he crashed through, flattening everything in sight. He could take punishment, too, but he certainly dished it out."

Henry recalled one game the Bulldogs played against Chicago. "We trailed by seven points and Jim did all the ball carrying in a ferocious 80-yard march to tie the score. On another occasion when Canton played the Philadelphia Quakers we reached the 20-yard line in the closing minutes. Philadelphia was pretty rugged as they had Lou Little, Bert Bell, Heinie Miller, Lud Wray, Swede Youngstrom and others. But when our Indians got going for one supreme push it was like cattle stampeding through a canebrake. Pete Calac, Joe Guyson and Cecil Griggs led the way and Jim reached pay dirt."

Henry recalled another contest in which the Bulldogs trailed the Dayton Triangles 21-18 with the clock running out fast. "There were only a couple minutes left when Jim shook off his blanket, pulled on his helmet, and trotted out on the field. The ball snapped back from center and he calmly drop-kicked a 60-yard field goal to tie the score. There never was any football player who could compare with the Sac and Fox."

I saw that Dayton Triangle game, played at Triangle park in Dayton how many years ago?—21 or 22 anyhow.

And if I recall correctly, Jim kicked two other field goals in that game from 45 and 50 yards, the goal post being on the goal line of course in those days.

And I'm astonished to hear at this late date that Pete, who got to be a great place kicker himself, regarded Thorpe's 60-yard dropkick as remarkable.

The crowd went away believing that it was just part of the show. That Canton could have scored by the same method any time it got the ball in midfield.

Football Has Job This Fall

Brown Sees Sport as Service Entertainment.

By GRANT DILLMAN

COLUMBUS —(U.P.)— The job of football next fall, despite a considerable lowering of the quality of the nation's teams, will be to provide entertainment for members of the armed services and insure continuation of the game itself, Paul Brown, football coach of Ohio State university, said today.

"I believe we'll have football next fall all right," Brown said, "but it will be f ·ball after a fashion. It won't be the same game the fans knew last year. The clean-cut precision play will be missing. The teams won't be as good."

The slight, balding former high school coach who led the Buckeyes to the championship of the Big Ten last year in his second year as coach, said the "financial end of the game and the standing of some particular team in the won and lost column" won't be as important as the entertainment it will offer to the men in service.

The quality of next fall's elevens could not help but be affected by the anticipated influx of freshmen as a result of relaxation of Big Ten eligibility rules, he said.

"Incoming freshmen usually are smaller and slower," he said. "Naturally that's going to be reflected in the play.—I don't think there'll be any radical changes in the kind of football that's played—just a general drop in the quality of individual teams."

Some inequalities may arise, he said, from the fact that the navy was permitting trainees to play in intercollegiate sports while the army denied them.

But it's the service schools like Great Lakes which really will have the edge this season," he continued. "They'll have thousands of men to draw on, including most of the topflight football stars from the colleges themselves."

The uncertain status of the men turning out for spring football has affected coaching methods, Brown said.

"In previous years we could take a group of men in the spring and drill them as a unit, knowing they would return to us next fall as the same unit," he explained. "Now we can't be sure who will be back so we have to impress each man with the fundamentals and hope we'll have him in the fall."

The western conference, he said, has as good a chance of struggling through the war as any league in the nation because most of the member schools were the larger colleges.

"It may even come to the same point it did in the last war when the western conference didn't recognize a conference championship for the duration," he said.

"But that no longer makes any difference. We're not trying to mold championship teams. We're helping to win a war."

The decision of Tiffin Columbian and Findlay not to have track teams was given as the reason for cancellation. Tiffin Junior Order and Fostoria withdrew from track competition several years ago.

GOMEZ GETS TO DO HIS OWN PITCHING

WALLINGFORD, Conn.—(AP)—Lefty Gomez, for many years the clown prince of the New York Yankees but now with the Boston Braves, is happy.

Gomez filled the bases in the camp game yesterday but Manager Casey Stengel kept him on the mound and the southpaw flinger worked his way out of the situation without permitting a score.

THREE GIANTS GET ARMY EXAMINATIONS

LAKEWOOD, N. J.—(INS)—Three more Giants today are scheduled to take their preliminary draft board examinations pending reclassification into 1-A.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

NEW YORK — (AP) — Week's worst gag: the Birmingham Barons are trying out a pitcher named John Orphal and Henry (Age-Herald) Vance relates that a fan saw him warming up the other day and asked the boy's name . . . "He's Orphal," replied Manager Johnny Riddle . . . "That's what you think," said the fan, "but he looked mighty good to me." . . . Five days after Ben Jones left the main division of the Calumet farm racing string at Hot Springs, a Louisville sports scribe asked him when the horses would reach Churchill Downs . . . "Pretty soon, I hope," said Ben. "You know I'm kinda anxious to see Whirly; this is the longest we've been away from each other in three years."

ONE-MINUTE SPORTS PAGE

The tip is out to watch Ohio State in football next fall. Our informant points out that Paul Brown has all the schoolboy talent in the state wrapped up for fall delivery, and even though he has to use 17-year-old kids, they'll be playing against over 17-year-olds.

TODAY'S GUEST STAR

SERVICE DEPARTMENT.

The Fort Sheridan, Ill., WAAC basketball team had to call off a game the other night because the team's center, Aux. Velma Berry, was married that night to Pfc. Earle Smith. The girls all wanted to attend the wedding . . . Lieut. Roy "One Play" Neary, former Xavier U. football and basketball player, has been killed in action in India. He earned the nickname by sprinting 65 yards to score on Ohio Wesleyan the first time he was given the ball in a varsity game, and Coach Clem Rowe probably will bet you that Roy scored against the Japs before he died.

CLEANING THE CUFF

Owner Al Sutphin of the Cleveland Barons finally had admitted that his club may seek a place in the National Hockey league . . . When Luke Sewell made his first visit to the Browns' training field at Cape Girardeau, Mo., just at daybreak one morning a man pulling a drag to smooth out the base paths came over and introduced himself as the town's mayor . . . Any day now you may expect to read that Ed Krause has been named basketball coach at Notre Dame succeeding the late George E. Keagan.

HUNTS HURLERS

Indians Lose Batting Eyes

Hope To Find Them In Pirate Series.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. —(AP)— The Cleveland Indians hoped to find their batting eyes today as they engaged the Pitsburgh Pirates in the second game of their exhibition series.

Manager Lou Boudreau prepped his tribesmen yesterday by sending them through a hitting session that lasted more than three hours.

Among the handful of spectators was Tris Speaker, the old gray eagle, who acted as a volunteer coach with Ray Mack as his special pupil. Speaker has refused to give up on Mack as a hitter.

Vice President Roger Peckinpaugh rejoined the club but brought no encouraging words, either of his negotiations with holdout Jeff Heath or of purchases which might supply batting strength.

He declared he had no recent correspondence with Heath and said the Indians were no nearer the purchase of Joe Vosmik from Minneopolis than they were a month ago.

Mel Harder, Al Smith and Chubby Dean were named to hurl against the Pirates today.

The Bucs and the Indians clashed for the first time last Saturday and the Pirates emerged with a 10-inning 4 to 3 decision.

In the Buffalo Creek Shops of the B & O, there's a man who typifies the spirit of all railroad workers today. His name is Anthony O'Donnell. His job is timekeeper. Despite the handicap of having only one arm, O'Donnell is putting into his work a thoroughness and enthusiasm which can come only of deep, true patriotic fervor.

Many times a day, his thoughts stray to his three sons in uniform—out there, somewhere. He'd like to see those sons . . . but his lips press together with renewed determination, for he knows that it needs the wholehearted efforts of himself and his thousands of co-workers to back up our fighting men and to bring them home soon.

Once in a while a wistful picture of himself in uniform floats through his mind . . . he and his three sons marching together, fighting together for the America they love. "Yes, sir," he told fellow workers recently, "I'd give my right arm, too, to preserve what this country's fighting for!"

The spirit of Anthony O'Donnell is the spirit of American Railroad workers everywhere. Engineers, brakemen, conductors, track-walkers . . . men in the signal towers, machinists in the shops, workers in the offices . . . each is putting real sixty-seconds-to-the-minute railroading into the job he was specially trained for, and doing it with Victory as his chief goal. Today, there are 1,320,000 War Workers in the American Railroads—a mighty army of 88 "divisions" . . . rolling against the Axis!

VICTORIAN MEMBERS HEAR OF RED CROSS

Mrs. D. N. Roller Presents Topic at Victorian Club Meeting; Mrs. Mark Wolcott, Maple Street, Hostess at Luncheon.

MRS. D. N. ROLLER, a member of the Richland County Red Cross Speakers' Bureau, was guest speaker, Monday afternoon at the luncheon meeting of the Victorian club, held at the home of Mrs. Mark Wolcott, Maple street. Mrs. Roller's topic was "The Work of the Red Cross."

When luncheon was served, guests were seated at a long table attractively appointed in white. An arrangement of white sweet peas centered the table.

At the close of the business meeting, Mrs. John Finefrock announced the officers chosen for the ensuing year. They are: president, Mrs. W. M. Layton; vice president, Miss Lois MacKellar, and secretary and treasurer, Mrs. Dwight Weir.

In her talk, Mrs. Roller said that the story of the Red Cross is one of great achievement. This great agency of mercy owes its beginning to Henri Du Nant, a humanitarian, residing in Switzerland. After witnessing painful and distressing scenes on Italian battlefields, in the Italian-Austrian war of 1859, he conceived a plan for relieving the suffering caused by war and disaster.

Because of his great interest and untiring promotion of this idea, Mrs. Roller went on, a committee of five men, three leading doctors of Switzerland, a Swiss general and Mr. Du Nant, met the following year in Geneva, to find a way to put this plan into action. A treaty was formed, which was, as time went on, signed by every civilized country on earth.

We find ourselves breathless, Mrs. Roller declared, as we consider the immensity of the work of the American Red Cross. We see near us, Mansfield's great field of activity, which includes production service, nutrition and campaign division, nurses aids, home nurses, nurses' recruiting service, blood donors' unit, motor corps, first aid training, home service, service of disaster relief, new work of camp and hospital, and staff assistants' work.

From the work of the well trained staff assistants, who give hours every day in the effort of local chapters to those who serve, in the international offices in Geneva we find the links in a chain of service that has a spirit of cooperation, resignation of self, and devotion to others that cannot be found elsewhere.

General MacArthur has expressed his appreciation for the Red Cross in these words, "when tragedy interrupts, as sooner or later it must, succor for the injured, the helpless, the destitute, speeds by land, by sea, by air. No call, no matter how great or small passes unheeded. The Red Cross never fails a soldier.

It brings to him a hint of home, a touch of cheer, whether he be in teeming jungle or Arctic waste. It bears a gift to him from no one, and yet from all. It warms him with the comfort that someone thinks of him, and that someone prays for him. It truly follows in the train of the Prince of Peace.

Post Nuptial Shower Honors Mrs. Griebling

Hostesses at a miscellaneous shower Friday night, for Mrs. Robert Griebling, the former Miss Janet Gadfield, were the Misses Eloise and Sleanor Piper, and Juanita Oswalt, at the former's home, 466 North Mulberry street.

Bridge was played at three tables, during the evening. Prizes were won by the Misses Meta Clelland, and Eleanor Laver and the honoree.

Mrs. Glynn Bethea poured, when luncheon was served buffet style, late in the evening. The hostesses used pink and white as their color scheme. Pink roses, in a lovely arrangement, comprised the centerpiece. Each guest was presented with a corsage of pink and white sweet peas.

A doll, to which a ribbon was attached led to the various gifts of Mrs. Griebling.

Guests who were present included Mrs. Harold Teeter, Mrs. Earl Swigart, Mrs. Bethea, and the Misses Betty Blackstone, Dorothy Moore, Thora Ruckman, Eileen Smith, Elaine Crall, Miss McClelland, Miss Laver, the hostesses and the honoree.

HOROSCOPE

For Wednesday, April 7.

A promising day for activity and progress in the launching of important projects is read from predominant lunar and mutual aspects. It will be found that those in influential positions will be ready to cooperate substantially, with funds. There may be dangerous intrigues to be alert to.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of opportunity for putting over some cherished plans with the support of those in financial position to contribute both funds and wise counsel. This might be endangered by impetuosity, or other immoderate conduct. Also there is a menace from subtle sources, snares, intrigues or malicious enmity. Guard against these, demonstrate ability and merit, and all should prosper and be happy.

If It Is Your Birthday.

A child born on this day should have much ability and ambition, together with popularity with higher-ups anud influential friends. But it may be impulsive, petulant and extravagant, and also easily imposed upon.

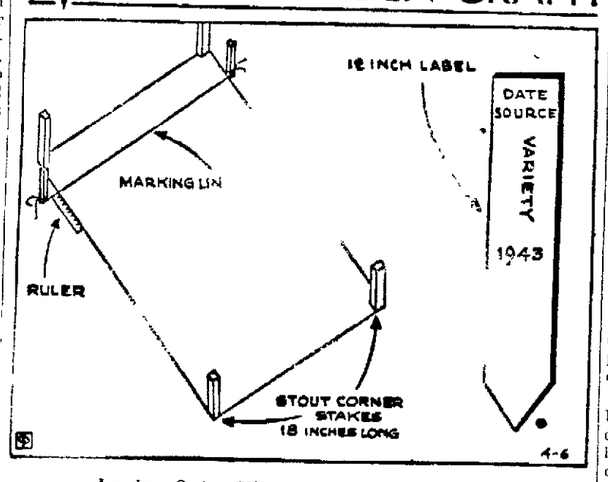
Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH



Laying Out a Victory Vegetable Garden.

By DEAN HALLIDAY
Released by Central Press Ass'n.

Neatness in the Victory garden is essential. Tools also should be kept clean. Dirty tools are evidence of a lazy gardener. Clean tools can do more work and faster.

A great deal of equipment is not necessary for a Victory garden, but before undertaking to plant seeds or set out plants, gather together four stout stakes, each 18 inches long. These should be used to mark the four corners of the garden plot. A ruler also is necessary, to measure the space between the rows. Rows should be regular and properly spaced, therefore a ruler is essential. The garden line is also an essential piece of equipment. For this purpose nothing is better than a heavy, tightly twisted cord such as that used on window shades. The use of the corner stakes and stakes to hold the line marking the rows is shown in the accompanying Garden-Graph.

As each garden row is planted it should be labeled. Twelve-inch label stakes, as illustrated, are most practical. At the top of the label put the planting date, below the source of supply of seed, under this the variety (lengthwise) and below that the year. Such information will prove of real value when next year's garden is planned and one wants to refer to the harvest results of this year's plantings.

Included in the committee were Mrs. Clara Hauserman, Mrs. T. A. Solomon, Mrs. Willa Galloway, Mrs. Dallas Tupps, Mrs. White, and Mrs. Smith. "Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

"Ah, yes," my father said, smiling a bit grimly. "I only saw the end of it—and its effect. Suppose you tell me the whole thing from the beginning."

I obeyed him, and he listened attentively.

"A performance which not only did credit to the actress, but to the playwright," he said, with a bow toward me.

"Unfortunately," I said, "I cannot claim much credit. 'Mary improvised most cleverly and improved my original conception."

"Nevertheless," my father said, "the plan certainly succeeded. Georges in the hideaway will have beautiful memories of Olina to contrast with unpleasant ones of Mary, which will be good for him, and Noel, with Mary's cajolery, will forgive and forget her crass exhibition, while he would be sorely troubled by any romantic attention Georges might lavish on her."

"And now, Richard," he said, "I haven't had a chance to ask you before about your trip up with Carolyn."

Trip With Carolyn.

"It was absolutely uneventful," Dicky answered. "Poor kid! I really felt sorry for her, as I never thought I could toward that brat. She clung to Ronald all through the trip, and I could hear him assuring his sister that he would trust her. When they parted she broke into sobs and I heard her say 'I will tell you everything, Ron, just as soon as I dare'."

"That means, I think," my father began judicially, "that all danger from Carolyn is over. Of course she feels she cannot tell now the secret she is hiding because of her terror lest Marion suffer."

"Well, we can leave Carolyn in college for a while, carefully guarded, of course, so that no visitor can harm her, and anyone who sees her will be trailed.

"A little later, Margaret, I shall have to turn Carolyn over to you. I think you may be able to show her that her best way of helping Marion will be to let us know that secret."

With a hidden shiver of dismay I wondered if my father realized how difficult a task he had just outlined for me so calmly.

"That experience must have taxed Ronald terribly," he said.

"It did," Dicky replied quickly. "He didn't make any comment, hardly spoke ten words on the trip down, but when I left him at the Underwoods he looked drained and exhausted."

"We won't keep you any longer, then," my father said decidedly. "Let me know early in the morning how he's bearing up, and if there's anything I can do."

"I'll do that sir," Dicky said as he left, and my father looked at me inquiringly.

"Mary will be ready for that accident early this morning?"

"Yes. I'm to go to their apartment at 8 o'clock," I said.

"The Authority on Authorities"

MAKE IT IMPOSSIBLE

Any good defender of a No Trump contract, when he knows his partner has one or more established low cards in some suit, will exert himself to the limit to unblock in other suits, so that his partner may regain the lead and cash the setting tricks. A canny declarer, however, should use every device he can find to make such moves impossible, and keep the dangerous hand out of the lead.

East led the heart 5 to the Q and A, and the heart J came back, North ducking and then winning the third heart with his K. Then he went to work on the clubs, leading the 6 to the K and A. West picked diamonds as his best chance to give East the lead, using his 7, which drew the 10, J and A. Now came the club Q from dummy. If West had played low, he would have had to win the next club and could not have put East in soon enough to do any good. But he played his J on the Q, and the third club then was won by East with the 10, whereupon two hearts put North down two tricks.

North could have nullified that defensive effort, in fact making it impossible to even try. Upon winning the third heart and leading the club 6, he should have finessed the 8 or 9. West would have won with the J, but his side could have taken nothing thereafter except his own club A, as the club K-Q, remaining in the dummy, would have blocked East from ever getting the lead. By this means, North would have made his contract air-tight, so long as West had the club A, with only three hearts.

Sport Podge

Mansfield's greatest grid-der of all time, Wilbur (Pete) Henry, athletic director and head football coach at Washington and Jefferson where he gained the fame that has rated him as an all-time All-American tackle, still regards Jim Thorpe as the greatest football player of them all.

Interviewed by Arthur Daley of the New York Times during the national invitational basketball tournament recently, Henry said of the Indian who played with him on the Canton Bulldogs, now recuperating from a heart attack: "Jim could do everything superbly well."

"We used to choose up sides for kicking games in the middle of the week. You had to kick from where you caught the ball. Jim would wait until we were backed up to the goal line and then he'd punt all the way to the other goal line. I've seen him kick 90 and 100 yards at a clip. He was a good passer in days when they tossed few forwards. Throwing the ball 50 or 60 yards was easy for him. No one could block or run the way he could.

* * *

In his prime he needed no interference. He'd just twist those nimble hips of his and tacklers would go down like ten pins hit by a bowling ball.

"The closest thing to weakness he had was his pass defense. If he thought the receiver could get the ball, that man never had a chance. But if he thought the ball was overthrown, he wouldn't bother to cover. Jim was always saving Jim, you know. He hated practice and often would go coon hunting instead. Often he didn't even know the signals. That didn't matter much in his prime but when he got older he needed help.

"But how he enjoyed the game in his early years! I can still hear that deep-throated laugh of his as he crashed through, flattening everything in sight. He could take punishment, too, but he certainly dished it out."

Henry recalled one game the Bulldogs played against Chicago. "We trailed by seven points and Jim did all the ball carrying in a ferocious 80-yard march to tie the score. On another occasion when Canton played the Philadelphia Quakers we reached the 20-yard line in the closing minutes. Philadelphia was pretty rugged as they had Lou Little, Bert Bell, Heinie Miller, Lud Wray, Swede Youngstrom and others. But when our Indians got going for one supreme push it was like cattle stampeding through a canebrake. Pete Calac, Joe Guyson and Cecil Griggs led the way and Jim reached pay dirt."

Henry recalled another contest in which the Bulldogs trailed the Dayton Triangles 21-18 with the clock running out fast. "There were only a couple minutes left when Jim shook off his blanket, pulled on his helmet, and trotted out on the field. The ball snapped back from center and he calmly drop-kicked a 60-yard field goal to tie the score. There never was any football player who could compare with the Sac and Fox."

I saw that Dayton Triangle game, played at Triangle park in Dayton how many years ago?—21 or 22 anyhow.

And if I recall correctly, Jim kicked two other field goals in that game from 45 and 50 yards, the goal post being on the goal line of course in those days.

And I'm astonished to hear at this late date that Pete, who got to be a great place kicker himself, regarded Thorpe's 60-yard dropkick as remarkable.

The crowd went away believing that it was just part of the show. That Canton could have scored by the same method any time it got the ball in midfield.

Football Has Job This Fall

Brown Sees Sport as Service Entertainment.

By GRANT DILLMAN

COLUMBUS —(U.P.)— The job of football next fall, despite a considerable lowering of the quality of the nation's teams, will be to provide entertainment for members of the armed services and insure continuation of the game itself, Paul Brown, football coach of Ohio State university, said today.

"I believe we'll have football next fall all right," Brown said, "but it will be f :ball after a fashion. It won't be the same game the fans knew last year. The clean-cut precision play will be missing. The teams won't be as good."

The slight, balding former high school coach who led the Buckeyes to the championship of the Big Ten last year in his second year as coach, said the "financial end of the game and the standing of some particular team in the won and lost column" won't be as important as the entertainment it will offer to the men in service.

The quality of next fall's elevens could not help but be affected by the anticipated influx of freshmen as a result of relaxation of Big Ten eligibility rules, he said.

"Incoming freshmen usually are smaller and slower," he said. "Naturally that's going to be reflected in the play. I don't think there'll be any radical changes in the kind of football that's played—just a general drop in the quality of individual teams."

Some inequalities may arise, he said, from the fact that the navy was permitting trainees to play in intercollegiate sports while the army denied them.

But it's the service schools like Great Lakes which really will have the edge this season," he continued. "They'll have thousands of men to draw on, including most of the topflight football stars from the colleges themselves."

The uncertain status of the men turning out for spring football has affected coaching methods, Brown said.

"In previous years we could take a group of men in the spring and drill them as a unit, knowing they would return to us next fall as the same unit," he explained. "Now we can't be sure who will be back so we have to impress each man with the fundamentals and hope we'll have him in the fall."

The western conference, he said, has as good a chance of struggling through the war as any league in the nation because most of the member schools were the larger colleges.

"It may even come to the same point it did in the last war when the western conference didn't recognize a conference championship for the duration," he said.

* * *

"But that no longer makes any difference. We're not trying to mold championship teams. We're helping to win a war."

Buckeye League Cancels Track

FREMONT, O. — (U.P.) — The Buckeye league track meet, only spring sports feature of the six-school circuit, has been cancelled this year, Principal A. C. Stokes of Fremont high school said today.

The decision of Tiffin Columbian and Findlay not to have track teams was given as the reason for cancellation. Tiffin Junior Order and Fostoria withdrew from track competition several years ago.

Fremont, defending champion, and Bowling Green were the only remaining schools with teams this year.

GOMEZ GETS TO DO HIS OWN PITCHING

WALLINGFORD, Conn.—(AP)—Lefty Gomez, for many years the clown prince of the New York Yankees but now with the Boston Braves, is happy.

Gomez filled the bases in the camp game yesterday but Manager Casey Stengel kept him on the mound and the southpaw flinger worked his way out of the situation without permitting a score.

THREE GIANTS GET ARMY EXAMINATIONS

LAKEWOOD, N. J.—(INS)—Three more Giants today are scheduled to take their preliminary draft board examinations pending reclassification into 1-A.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

NEW YORK — (AP) — Week's worst gag: the Birmingham Barons are trying out a pitcher named John Orphal and Henry (Age-Herald) Vance relates that a fan saw him warming up the other day and asked the boy's name . . . "He's Orphal," replied Manager Johnny Riddle . . . "That's what you think," said the fan, "but he looked mighty good to me." . . . Five days after Ben Jones left the main division of the Calumet farm racing string at Hot Springs, a Louisville sports scribe asked him when the horses would reach Churchill Downs . . . "Pretty soon, I hope," said Ben. "You know I'm kinda anxious to see Whirly; this is the longest we've been away from each other in three years."

ONE-MINUTE SPORTS PAGE

The tip is out to watch Ohio State in football next fall. Our informant points out that Paul Brown has all the schoolboy talent in the state wrapped up for fall delivery, and even though he has to use 17-year-old kids, they'll be playing against over 17-year-olds.

TODAY'S GUEST STAR

SERVICE DEPARTMENT.

The Fort Sheridan, Ill., WAAC basketball team had to call off a game the other night because the team's center, Aux. Velma Berry, was married that night to Pfc. Earle Smith. The girls all wanted to attend the wedding . . . Lieut. Roy "One Play" Neary, former Xavier U. football and basketball player, has been killed in action in India. He earned the nickname by sprinting 65 yards to score on Ohio Wesleyan the first time he was given the ball in a varsity game, and Coach Clem Rowe probably will bet you that Roy scored against the Japs before he died.

CLEANING THE CUFF

Owner Al Sutphin of the Cleveland Barons finally had admitted that his club may seek a place in the National Hockey league . . . When Luke Sewell made his first visit to the Browns' training field at Cape Girardeau, Mo., just at daybreak one morning a man pulling a drag to smooth out the base paths came over and introduced himself as the town's mayor . . . Any day now you may expect to read that Ed Krause has been named basketball coach at Notre Dame succeeding the late George E. Keagan.

Indians Lose Batting Eyes

Hope To Find Them In Pirate Series.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. —(AP)— The Cleveland Indians hoped to find their batting eyes today as they engaged the Pitsburgh Pirates in the second game of their exhibition series.

Manager Lou Boudreau prepped his tribesmen yesterday by sending them through a hitting session that lasted more than three hours.

Among the handful of spectators was Tris Speaker, the old gray eagle, who acted as a volunteer coach with Ray Mack as his special pupil. Speaker has refused to give up on Mack as a hitter.

Vice President Roger Peckinpaugh rejoined the club but brought no encouraging words, either of his negotiations with holdout Jeff Heath or of purchases which might supply batting strength.

He declared he had no recent correspondence with Heath and said the Indians were no nearer the purchase of Joe Vosmik from Minneapolis than they were a month ago.

Mel Harder, Al Smith and Chubby Dean were named to hurl against the Pirates today.

The Bucs and the Indians clashed for the first time last Saturday and the Pirates emerged with a 10-inning 4 to 3 decision.

Reds Tangle With Bruins

Open Two-Game Series With Chicago Cubs.

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds today embarked for French Lick, Inc., where they meet the Chicago Cubs in the first of a two-game exhibition series. Manager Bill McKechnie indicated rookies Bob Malloy and Vernon Stone would handle mound chores with Lefty Clyde Shoun sandwiched for a three-inning stint between them.

The Rhinelanders, victorious in their only exhibition tilt, a 5-3 win over the Chicago White Sox, spent yesterday indoors with cancellation of a scheduled intrasquad game. Gerald Walker reported to practice for the first time and gave evidence he conditioned himself during his holdout siege at his Orando, Fla., home.

Estel Crabtree, Buckey Walters and Damon Phillips remained in Bloomington today, Crabby nursing an injured shin, Walters still recuperating from a slight ankle sprain and Phillips running a slight temperature.

Dr. Gillespie Returns.

Surrounded by a youthful cast of comparative screen newcomers, Lionel Barrymore stars again in another of M. G. M.'s Dr. Gillespie series. This time it is in "Dr. Gillespie's New Assistant," opening tomorrow at the Madison. The fresh faces are Van Johnson, Richard Quine and Keye Luke who are introduced into the series as a trio of young internes engaged to take some of the burden from the shoulders of the aging Dr. Gillespie. One of the first problems facing the young internes is a case of amnesia. Its solution provides the backbone for the comedy, drama and mystery. Second film at the Madison is "Lady Bodyguard."

Man Missing — Harold Jarvis, who resides south of Mifflin, told police today that his son, Robert Lee Jarvis, 21, left home at 11:30 p. m. Sunday to go to the home of his uncle, Oscar Jarvis, near Butler, but that he did not get there and had not been seen since. Young Jarvis is described as being five feet six inches tall and weighing 190 pounds.

Hunt Suspicious Pair—City detectives were unable yesterday to locate two men, about 25 and 26 years old, who were reported behaving suspiciously at the Lee and Cady wholesale firm on North Diamond street. W. D. Schroeder, the manager, told officers the men walked past the building several times, looking it over, came in to ask about a jacket they saw inside, and then left, saying they would be back later.

Retailers Warned — Retailers who lower point values in order to expediate sale of perishable items threatened with spoilage were warned today by the ration board to make detailed reports to the boards. Points lost by them in this way, except on transfers made between March 29 and April 10, inclusive, can be recovered if applications are made with the local board within 30 days after the month in which the loss occurred. Recovery is limited to two per cent of the allowable inventory, Charles C. Beeman, ration chairman, said.

CHAPTER V

Uncle Peter Quincy broke in on Rosemary's speech.

"Look thar, mum! . . . Look! . . . Look!"

Rosemary was driving. She slowed the car. He was pointing excitedly, but neither she nor Bill St. Clair could see anything.

"What is it, Uncle Pete?"

"It's Nebuchednezzar himself, mum! Don't you see him? That he flies. He's aiming to pick up something. He's the silver guardian now. Oh—WHOO-O-O-O-O hah-h-h-h!"

That astonishing cry, like a stentorian yodel, must surely have carried miles. It hit one cliff 200 yards away and bounced back without apparent loss of volume.

"Shore! That's him!" Uncle Pete obviously was delighted. "He's been nesting up at the head of Purple Canyon, right over the First Discovery Hole, for more'n 10 years. Raises a nest of younguns, him and his missus. I see 'em learn to fly. He ain't scared of me no more, hardly to speak of."

Rosemary glanced back, caught Bill's eye. So that's the kind of fellow Uncle Pete was! His old face was upturned now in a peculiar look of ecstasy, following the bird. "He's a bald eagle, yes mum. You see him on money, when you git any. He's a fighter from way back. He takes and runs every other eagle away from Purple Canyon. Lord of the skies, yes mum."

The episode drove Rosemary's confession out of mind. She had said to Little Boss, "There's something I must tell you, right now." At that moment she had been consumed with her own secret which lurked as a black thing within her, and which she knew would have to come out quickly with Harry Boyle on the scene. She was determined to tell it before Boyle could.

"We will talk soon, Rosemary," Little Boss put in now, remembering. "When we get to Lightning, I hope Uncle Pete here can assure us of rooms in his hotel?"

The old fellow looked at him as if slightly confused. "You want rooms in the Lightning City?"

"If possible, Uncle Pete. Although, everywhere I travel now hotels are crowded. In Washington, rooms bring a premium. In San Francisco I almost had to use sabotage to get a place to sleep!"

"I got 42 rooms."

"One for me, perhaps? And another with bath or nearest the bath—for Rosemary here. Say, on a monthly basis."

The old fellow's brow wrinkled a bit, but he didn't say no. Bill congratulated himself. Lucky, to have made friends with a man who actually owned a hotel, no matter how eccentric he might be. Bill spoke now to Rosemary again.

"You've been worrying," he said. "If Option didn't have what we needed, then probably you are right in feeling that Lightning will. We'll spend the afternoon getting settled, looking over the town, inquiring about the lumber facilities, perhaps renting a headquarters office right away and setting a conference for tomorrow morning. But tonight, Rosemary — I — I haven't spoken like this to you before, ever. After all—" he laughed a little, "it was you who mentioned my gray hairs! But perhaps I might ask you to go to dinner and a show with me tonight? In—shall we say a sort of father-daughter manner?"

Rosemary's heart leaped. But she laughed, too. "Oh, Little Boss! You are terrible!"

"You—would rather not?"

"Not that, silly! Of course I'll love it. I mean, no father-daughter feeling. Why I—I'm thrilled all over."

"Oh!"

It was all he said, at the moment. This was the first time he had ever paid any really personal attention to her. Thrilled all over? Rosemary was literally that! Bill St. Clair, Little Boss of the big architect bureau in Washington, had actually asked her for a date! Her, Rosemary L—Lee!"

All at once, despair struck her again.

No! No, she couldn't. It would be utterly impossible. Deceitful. Distressing all around. Unfair. She had responded eagerly without thinking, because a date with him was about the nicest thing any girl could imagine any time. But the spectre of Harry Boyle was smirking at her again now, like some living ghost disembodied back there at Option to follow her up this Purple Canyon road.

Bill and Uncle Pete were talking, but she scarcely heard them. Uncle Pete was boasting of the rare scenic beauty on all sides. Bitter thoughts blinded Rosemary's eyes. She didn't see the strip of green that lined the roadway, the vermillion cliffs that held up the sky. She wasn't listening when Uncle Pete showed Bill a jackrabbit leaping 40 feet ahead of a coyote. She didn't see the white rocks eroded to look like a gigantic Indian face.

Tonight, then, she would tell Little Boss about Harry Boyle. Tell him everything. He might fire her, send her back east. But she couldn't go on deceiving him, especially if he was going to ask her for dates. Little Boss had shown a tenderness toward her several times, she remembered. Little extra consideration beyond that any boss needs to show. And when he had asked her to take her out this evening, his tones had been unmistakable. Yes, any girl, anywhere, could love this man. And count herself lucky.

The blackness inside would have overwhelmed her, perhaps, except that her car demanded more attention now. They circled around a great boulder half a block long, and all at once Uncle Pete half stood in the car and pointed excitedly again.

"Thar 'tis, thar 'tis!" he exclaimed. "Thar's Lightning! You see how purple the canyon's gitting already, mum? You see?"

It was still early afternoon but there was a purplish tint, sure enough. Haze seemed to be toning down the rock vermillion. Eerie, mystic haze.

"The—the city? Town?" Bill asked, staring ahead.

"Yes, mum. That's Lightning. She used to have 14,000 people."

"How many now?" Rosemary asked.

"Mum?" Uncle Pete looked surprised.

Rosemary and Bill were staring out. If this was really the town of Lightning, where were the people? Where was anybody at all?

They had passed no cars, no suburbs, no filling stations or stores or roadside stands or other evidence of human life here. And yet—300 yards or so ahead lay the first houses, an unmistakeable main street.

They could even see the two-story buildings. The rows of shops. Signs. Dwellings. All structures were of the native rock, it appeared. But windows were mostly gone. Signs were faded and old-fashioned. A hitching rail for horses was rotting away. And —no living soul was visible.

"Good lord, Rosemary!" Little Boss breathed. "A ghost town!"

IN THE CAPITAL-- By Raymond Clapper

WASHINGTON—In the long run much will depend on what the victor governments do about monetary stabilization.

Secretary Morgenthau is beginning discussions of possible measures with appropriate committees of congress. Soon representatives of Allied nations will visit Washington to discuss possible measures.

This is the dullest of all subjects. I don't know of any way to make monetary stabilization interesting. Secretary Morgenthau doesn't even try. But whether you are interested in it or not, you will be affected by it. The whole state of the world after the war will be affected by the arrangements that are made in advance regarding monetary stabilization.

Clapper

This is largely a question of the value that one nation's currency is to have in terms of another nation's money. When a nation depreciates its currency, that acts as a price cut in foreign trade. Depreciation will be a strong temptation to hard-pressed governments after the war. It offers a patent-medicine method of underselling competitors abroad while reducing the burden of debt at home and stimulating business activity.

After this war a large amount of rehabilitation help will be necessary. Extensive investment will be required to rebuild and modernize industries to develop utilities and public works of all kinds.

After the last war American private capital invested heavily in foreign loans many of which became worthless. Germany had been loaded with a heavy reparations debt and in addition borrowed heavily through American bond issues. She depreciated her own currency in what some have always considered deliberate sabotage. Germany's fantastic inflation, the drying up of international trade at the end of the line, the banking collapse in central Europe, all combined to aggravate the worst depression of the century. The violent backwash was felt in the United States recently enough to leave its mark fresh on all minds.

In the middle '30s the United States treasury entered into the tripartite agreement with Britain and France to peg the three currencies steady in their relation to each other. An American stabilization fund of two billion dollars was used to back this arrangement although only a fraction of the money was ever drawn upon and the fund itself has earned a small net profit. Undoubtedly this stabilization fund prevented economic chaos and possibly disastrous panic during the early days of the war.

Secretary Morgenthau is asking congress to authorize continuation of this fund. It is inconceivable that congress would refuse. Most members recognize how imperative it is that the United States keep a steady hand in this business. We have a gold pile of 22 billion dollars, most of the gold in the world, and we have most of the exchange and short-term credits centered here. Our own interests as well as the interests of other nations require order and stable relationships with the currencies of other countries.

Treasury officials are working over proposals for expanding the management of international monetary affairs into some form of United Nations stabilization fund.

An international agency is definitely needed to keep foreign-exchange rates stable. It is needed to adjust currency values of the different nations in an orderly way. Some such agency must exist also to rescue hard-pressed countries from unbearable financial pressure. American thinking runs along that line.

The British, through John Maynard Keynes, are suggesting an international currency union with a world currency known as "bancor." This would be used only by governments and central banks for clearing international trade balances and credits. It would not be actually money for individual use but an instrument of bookkeeping among governments.

Whatever the form some international banking agency for the United Nations seems necessary. Since its services will be needed promptly at the end of hostilities organizational work should begin promptly.

HOUSE GROUPS TO GET STABLE MONEY PLANS

Morgenthau Reveals Post-War Financial Program: Silver Senators Growl.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., today presents his "tentative proposal for post-war international monetary stabilization to three house committees amidst rumblings of dissent in the senate silver bloc to the plan for returning to the gold standard.

"Two-thirds of the people of the world now are on a silver standard," said Sen Pat McCarran, (D., Nev.), "and any plan for international currency stabilization should include a silver as well as a gold base."

McCarran objected specifically to Morgenthau's proposal to set up a $5,000,000,000 currency stabilization fund rooted in a universal gold standard.

"That would be exceedingly dangerous for the United States," he said. "We can't go into any such thing without a thorough study by some one better equipped to formulate such plans than some of those who are now considering it."

In general senators who heard Morgenthau agreed on the need for some international plan for stabilizing currencies to facilitate the rehabilitation of international trade after the war. But they declined to comment on Morgenthau's specific points.

Morgenthau meets today with the house committees on foreign relations, banking and currency, and coinage weights and measures. It was a similar senate group to whom he testified yesterday.

Chairman Walter F. George, (D., Ga.), of the special senate committee on post-war economic policies warned after hearing Morgenthau that currency debasement after the war would lead to "economic confusion, if not chaos."

SHOWDOWN ON INFLATION DUE IN VOTE TODAY

Senate Decides Whether or Not It Will Override FDR Veto of Bankhead Bill.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — The task of holding the line against inflation comes to a showdown in the senate today on a vote to override President Roosevelt's veto of the Bankhead bill.

Mr. Roosevelt tossed the problem into congress' lap by vetoing the bill which would forbid deduction of farm benefit payments in the computation of parity prices. He warned that it would loose a "tornado of inflation."

On the eve of the senate vote, the Office of Price Administration warned that enactment of the Bankhead bill would increase retail food costs 6.7 per cent, add $1,500,000,000 to the consumers' annual food bill, and boost by $500,000,000 a year the cost of feeding the armed forces and the Allies.

Price Administrator Prentiss M. Brown is expected to tell the senate agriculture committee the same thing again today when he opens hearings on a companion bill by Rep. Stephen Pace, (D., Ga.), to force inclusion of farm labor costs in the parity formula. Brown already has asserted that the Bankhead and Pace bills together would increase living costs 16 to 17 per cent.

The senate vote on the Bankhead bill will provide the sharpest test of President Roosevelt's strength in this congress. If his veto is sustained it will be his first major victory over the farm bloc in a long time.

A last minute unofficial poll indicated that the decision could go either way with a margin of one or two votes. Farm organization leaders expected 75 votes to be cast and claimed at least 51—one more than the two-thirds necessary to override the veto.

Farm bloc senators who rolled up a 78-to-2 margin for the bill when it passed the senate originally on Feb. 25, conceded privately, however, that the vote might go the other way by the same margin.

In addition to Brown's and President Roosevelt's warning, Chester C. Davis, the new food administrator, has told farm organization leaders that he will oppose the Pace bill when he appears before the senate committee later this week. That indicated that he has thrown his complete support behind the president on wage and price stabilization. Farm leaders have been trying to get full control over prices transferred to Davis.

Members of the league tested their attitudes with a questionnaire on "Am I an Isolationist?"

PLANE TO FLY 17,000 MILES

Kaiser Says Projected Craft Could Go Three Fourths Around World Non-Stop.

(By Associated Press)

PORTLAND, Ore.—A gigantic cargo plane capable of flying almost three-fourths of the way around the world without stopping—that's the latest Henry J. Kaiser scheme.

The nation's No. 1 shipbuilder, now entering the airplane field, said today his engineers were drawing up plans for such a plane, and he could be in production before the war ends. He added government and military agencies had not yet seen the plans.

As projected by his engineers, the ship would dwarf even the army's huge transports and four-motored bombers.

It is conceived as a 28-foot flying wing, without body, without tail. Four engines developing 8,000 horsepower would power the craft. Fully loaded, it would weigh 175,000 pounds.

"Loaded with only fuel, it will be able to fly 17,000 miles without stopping," Kaiser told the Columbia Empire Industries, Inc., last night in a speech.

"Loaded with fuel and bombs it can bring to Tokyo the havoc and destruction that were visited on Pearl Harbor."

Kaiser commented that "radically new principles, giving new economies of production and operation" would be incorporated in the plane. Details were not disclosed.

A former Mansfield girl (also a former News-Journal employe—adv.) now with Fred Waring's band, appeared pictorially in last Sunday's edition of the Columbus Citizen. She is Jane Wilson, whose address is now New York city. She formerly lived with her mother, Mrs. Janet Wilson, on Blymyer avenue here, but her mother is now with her in New York. CHARGES FLY AS CHICAGO VOTES

Both Sides Claim Fraud as Mayor Kelly Seeks Fourth Term.

(By International News Service)

CHICAGO — Amid charges of fraud and intimidation from both sides, Chicago today voted on its mayor for the next four years—Mayor Edward J. Kelly, Democrat or George B. McKibbin, Republican.

It was the first major Chicago election since the entry of the nation in the second world war.

A comparatively light vote was indicated in the city's 3,760 precincts as the early voters registered their preference. With a total registration of 1,814,000, predictions were that the vote would total less than 1,200,000.

Polls opened at 6 a. m. and will close at 5 p. m.

There was little wagering on the outcome, but odds favoring Kelly ran as high as 5 to 1. If he is successful, it will be his fourth term and on its completion he will have served 14 consecutive years to shatter all records for length of service as Chicago's mayor.

The record now is held by former Mayors William Hale Thompson and Carter H. Harrison, jr., each of whom was in office 12 years although not continuously.

Should McKibbin win today, it will be his first election to office. He was appointed, however, by Gov. Dwight H. Green in 1941 as Illinois state director of finance and resigned that job to become the G. O. P. nominee for mayor.

Both camps expressed confidence of victory. John T. Dempsey, manager of the McKibbin campaign, said all signs pointed to a Republican mayor for Chicago.

Patrick A. Nash, Cook county Democratic chairman, predicted Kelly's re-election by a 200,000 majority.

RULING DUE IN SOLDIER'S CASE

Final disposition of the cases of Aubrey Boterf, 26-year-old soldier, and the 13-year-old girl with whom he is charged with having improper relations will be made soon Juvenile Judge Stuart Cramer said today.

Unless word is received soon from the commanding officer of the Ft. Benning, Ga., company, where Boterf was stationed, concerning army wishes in the matter, judgment will be pronounced, Cramer said.

Boterf remains in county jail in default of $500 bond which was revoked Saturday following the girl's second disappearance from home and during which, she said, she was in company with Boterf.

The girl is now in detention quarters.

IN HOLLYWOOD-- By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD—Rationing may be a pain in the point-book to you but I imagine it is not without its joys to Reginald Gardiner, the sworn enemy of the buffet supper.

It was love rather than constant exposure to buffet suppers and parties to inform that drove the droll Mr. G. to matrimony last December. It is no handicap to his comedy to say however that Mr. G. (see former Nadia Petrova) has had a bellyful of at least three features of the buffet supper, namely the omnipresent roast turkey.

As a prize bachelor—well-dressed, very handsome—Mr. G. was asked to more than his share of the stand-up-and-eat parties. Mr. G. isn't the type to complain openly, likes to sit at a table when he eats and he shudders at the thought of turkey. Secretly, before his marriage he gave out with songs of woe at his impending escape from the alleged ills of bachelorhood. "The life of a Hollywood bachelor," he said, "is a depressing one."

Coons

He still feels for single men. "It's wonderful," he says, "to leave home to go dining assisted by my wife and we have nothing to do—nothing whatever—in the evening.

"When I was a bachelor the big mystery was what was for dinner. Along about 5 o'clock each day came the question: What to do for dinner. I couldn't just sit in my apartment and I had no meals there. That meant going out for dinner. That, in turn, meant calling someone to go out with me. I called this one and that one. I dialed and dialed and nobody would be home. I would wind up in frustration, tangled up in crossed wires. . . ."

Mr. G. has a way of expressing such despair over the most commonplace matters a way which lends them the importance of Greek tragedies. About buffet suppers:

You stand around until about 11 o'clock drinking too many Scotches which you don't need until your hostess says "Come on everyone, let's eat." Then cautiously you round the corner and peer at the table and there at the end closest to you is that turkey, leering at you. There's no escape. It's always. Oh Reggie you must have some of the boy here" and then my plate is loaded with. At the other end of the table is always a big bowl of spaghetti.

"One day I nearly committed suicide. I had turkey and spaghetti at a buffet luncheon and turkey and spaghetti at a buffet supper all in the same day.

"It is the complete lack of imagination at these suppers that defeats me. Mrs. Jones is wondering what to have and she remembers. An' Mrs. Smith had turkey and spaghetti, that's what I'll have too.' It's a vicious chain of imitation."

You can see what food rationing will do for this anti-turkey crusade. His hopes are sky-high. "Little dabs of this and that—should be less mean the thing if there are any buffet suppers at all."

EXPLAINS AID FOR AGED AT GALION MEET

Representative of Division Talks at Rotary Session, Answers Queries.

GALION—Clearing up some of the points on aid for the aged, Ed A. Geockenbach, personal representative of the chief of the division of aid for the aged, was guest speaker Monday night for the Galion Rotary club meeting at Hotel Talbott.

He said that there really is no old age pension system in Ohio; and explained that it is known as the division of the aid for the aged. He said that the federal government pays one-half the cost for this system, while the state bears the other half of the expense. All money for this division is derived from taxation, he stated.

The federal government, he said, will not help any program which is not based upon actual need, and that is why these monthly payments to the individual are based upon his or her actual need. Each case, the speaker explained, is investigated. This explains why payments differ for different people. He cited case histories to illustrate his point.

In explaining the property section of the law, which has been much misunderstood, Geockenbach said that when a property owner who has been receiving aid from the state, dies, and the spouse also dies, the state presents a bill for the amount of aid rendered up to that time, to the administrator of the state. Then if any equity is left after it has been paid back to the state, the balance reverts to the estate.

Most complaints on this diversion of the law, he said, have come from children of those receiving aid, the children having had to certify before their parents received aid from the state, that they were unable to support their parents.

The speaker also explained the insurance policy matter for those receiving aid.

Ninety-nine per cent of the insurance policies which are assigned to the state by the recipients of state aid, he said are small industrial policies which had been taken out simply to provide for last illnesses and burial. Few of these are larger than $200. These policies are put in trust to the division, and after the individual's death, expenses are deducted from the policy, an if anything is left over, it goes to the division for reimbursement of previous expenses. The assignment of insurance policies to this division was only put into effect after the first five years of the law's operation. This was done because of many cases where policies have been entrusted to relatives or others, and the latter have had them cashed, leaving nothing for burial of the recipients when death came.

The speaker said that there are some receiving aid who have temporary or casual employment, but a maximum of $480 per year has been set for any and all sources of income, including income from the state.

At the close of his talk, the speaker answered questions from his listeners.

Guests of the club were Robert Porter and H. K. Day, both of Mansfield and Glen Kerschner.

Only Military Censorship Justified

WHAT seems to have been an idea of President Roosevelt that newspaper representatives should be barred from forthcoming United Nations conferences failed to pass the "trial balloon" stage.

In any event, Stephen T. Early, White House press secretary, and Elmer Davis, director of the Office of War Information, are quoted in denials of any such intent.

Newspapers are the recognized medium through which information is passed to the public in tangible form, for careful reading and thoughtful consideration.

Properly conducted censorship is recognized as necessary during war, and it is also obvious that some phases of diplomatic negotiations must be kept secret until decisions have been reached, but the idea of throwing a veil of secrecy around all proceedings of such conferences as are being planned is entirely out of accord with American policies of open discussion of national affairs by an informed public.

An editorial comment by the Chicago Sun, ardent administration supporter, touches on this subject as follows:

"If Mr. Roosevelt fears that journalistic fakers and rumormongers may interfere with the work of the conferences, let him remember that the fakers and rumormongers will get in their dirty work no matter what censorship is imposed. Indeed, these disseminators of misinformation thrive on secrecy. The best way to counteract them is to make independent, responsible news possible."

A fact sometimes overlooked, when reference is made to "freedom of the press," is that it is FREEDOM OF THE PEOPLE TO BE INFORMED that is the really important matter, and that it is only through freedom of speech and of the press that this right can be maintained.

'Point' Values Should Be Uniform

QUICK break-down of the point system of restricting meat purchases is threatened by the well intentioned but obviously impractical OPA ruling that dealers who have an oversupply of meat will be granted permission to reduce point requirements in order to dispose of their surplus, and thus prevent spoilage.

In theory this may seem proper procedure, as viewed from Washington, but in practice it creates an intolerable situation for retail meat dealers who buy in anticipation of probable patronage and who are therefore required to demand the stated number of points from their customers while competitors are privileged to sell meat on the basis of fewer points.

This situation developed locally over the week-end to sufficient extent to demonstrate that unless point values are kept uniform with all dealers the whole program will be jeopardized.

Announcement that the local ration board has authority to reduce point requirements to meet emergency conditions in individual cases and that this authorization extends only to May 31, does no more than throw an added burden on the board, with endless confusion inescapable.

THE ONLY WAY THE MEAT RATIONING PROGRAM WILL WORK IS TO RESTORE PUBLIC ASSURANCE THAT POINT VALUES WILL BE IDENTICAL WHEREVER MEAT IS BOUGHT!

Remember Thursday Night Blackout

MANSFIELD'S experimental dimouts, conducted a few weeks ago, now lead to participation in a 20-county blackout test, scheduled for Thursday night from 9:25 until 9:55.

This will include turning off street lights, and there will be a 15-minute period during which all motor traffic is to stop, with car lights extinguished.

The response of Mansfielders to requirements of the sectional and city-wide dimouts was commended by civilian defense officials and it is anticipated that even greater care will be exercised during the actual blackout Thursday night, as this is designed to demonstrate the thoroughness of civilian defense preparations in this part of Ohio.

Whether or not the war ever reaches a point of placing inland American cities in danger of air attacks, these precautionary measures are fully justified, as it is only by making such tests that citizens can be familiarized with proper procedure in the event of emergency.

Report On Religious Census

OPPORTUNITY for home missionary work is disclosed in the report of Mansfield's recent religious census, which shows considerably under half of this city's population coming within the influence of Mansfield's 64 churches and religious organizations of various kinds.

The total of 23,381 cards reported by 1,620 volunteer workers indicates thoroughness of the canvass, and the time and effort involved seems justified by the information secured.

Mansfield's population, according to the 1940 federal census, was 37,154 and the religious census, as reported at yesterday's meeting of the Ministerial association, shows membership of 16,006 in 61 churches and groups.

In addition to those holding church membership, 2,716 were listed as "non-members who attend" and 4,177 as non-members who expressed a preference. Only 1,630, including children, indicated "no preference".

No attempt was made, it appears, to grade the extent of activity of "members", or regularity of their attendance, and a check-up of total attendance in relation to membership would also be helpful in estimating the potentialities of religious influence on this community.

As cards showing "non-members who attend", and non-members who have a religious preference, pass into the hands of ministers and religious workers, and as the 1,630 who have not yet reached the point of "preference" are considered, the opportunity for some diplomatically conducted home missionary work will probably become apparent.

It was several years ago that Mussolini advised his countrymen to "live dangerously," and the Allied air force is seeing to it that his suggestion is followed.

Nations Ponder Refugee Problem

By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON—While all the propaganda in favor of international co-operation after the war is going on a much more subtle battle is being fought, mostly behind the scenes. Once in a while it crops out, but the public in general, not knowing what went before, nor what are the objectives, seldom appreciates the real significance of the few feet of film, so to speak, shown to them.

The most recent bit of the picture which the public saw was a statement given to the newspapers by Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles. This had to do chiefly with the refugee problem, about which the London and Washington governments have been anything but in accord.

There was no intention on the part of the state department to indulge in any publicity about the whole thing. But at the tensest moment of the maneuvering the British ambassador, Lord Halifax, sent a letter to Rabbi Wise, to be read at a big meeting in New York, setting forth what the British had done about the problem. It was in almost precisely the language of a note which the British had sent to Washington, in an effort to get Uncle Sam to do more about it.

THERE was considerable heat in Washington when this was noticed—heat because it was thought that the British had taken this method of putting the state department on the spot, so to speak, and directing public opinion in this country toward a drive on Washington to do more for the refugees—to equal what Britain had done.

That was the reason the department suddenly released a statement of what this government HAD done, which, incidentally, the state department believes can be compared to what Britain has done without anyone thinking this country has not done its share.

But then came a move which really put London on the spot. This government proposed to the British foreign office that a conference should be held to map out just what should be done about these refugees—and it was proposed that the conference be held at Ottawa!

ON THE SURFACE this seemed fair enough. Certainly it was nothing the British could take exception to, as Ottawa is by way of being as convenient for one as the other. The joker is that this would bring Canada into the picture with a vengeance, and Canada is far tougher on this refugee business than is the United States.

Canadian restrictions on immigration before the war grew up much as did those in the United States, the underlying reason in each case being the objections of labor union leaders to more cheap immigrant labor, and the talking point being that the quality of the immigration was much lower than it formerly was.

But in such a conference it would not be necessary for our officials to do any fighting—the Canadians would do it for us. The point that there is plenty of land in this country is even more applicable to Canada, for instance, while her willingness to exceed immigrant quotas is even less than that of our labor leaders.

And now the British are probably regretting that letter to Rabbi Wise!

Twenty-five per cent of the college students questioned did'n't know that Lincoln was president during the Civil war. But worse than that, 30 per cent had no idea who was president during the last World war. Some said Alf Landon was.

Maybe those questionnaire programs are just about ruining American education. Three more quiz programs, bringing the total to 20, are going on the air and if they ain't lowering regard for education, nothing is.

* * *

The air is loaded with quiz programs which ask questions any moron ought to be able to answer. The professors coach the volunteers along with hints and cues and then make cash payments to the boys and girls who finally give Washington's first name as "George."

* * *

The trouble is that the whole country has gone quiz program crazy. Nobody bothers to concentrate on an education, good or bad, in a school or college any more.

"Fifth Column."

Credit for the characterization "fifth column" for enemies who work from within is commonly attributed to the Spanish dictator Franco.

The Spanish dictator is said to have coined the phrase during the recent civil war in Spain, specifically while the rightists were besieging Madrid for the first time.

During this bloody affair, in a speech in Salamanca, Franco asserted:

"I have four columns marching on Madrid—and a fifth column inside Madrid which will rise up and fight for us at the opportune moment."

The words immediately gained world-wide currency.

Timely Editorial

'Ain't' Defended.

We suspect that the eminent Jacques Barzan, Columbia university historian and language expert, has been reading some of the outpourings of various federal bureaus as expressed in their inter-office communications. In reviewing a new book, "Usage and Abusage," by one Mr. Partridge, a linguistic purist, he comes to the defense of that standard vulgarism "ain't," the long-time horrible example of English gone to provincial seed.

"I find 'ain't' not only harmless but choice, expressive, sturdy, refined, beautiful and elevating compared to some of the horrors Mr. Partridge recommends and produces," he says.

Two examples of the sort of bureaucratic lingual barbarisms developed in Washington during the stress of wartime functioning are reported by the New York Herald Tribune as having flowered in the OWI's erudite precincts. When the services of an employe are dispensed with, he is not discharged, fired, canned or sacked. He is "deactivated." We suppose this is purely a hypothetical process as we haven't recently heard of any government bureau that was doing anything except expand. — Columbus Dispatch.

Behind the Scenes

THE annual high school operetta was a successful rendition of "Rio Rico," a musical fantasy of the southern seas. It had parts for both the boys' and girls' glee clubs: a great inventor, a millionaire yachtsman, a colored cook, a captain's ghost, an old maid aunt, and a corps of gold-hunting college students who made a radio broadcast of their adventures. The house was full. We parents hugely enjoyed it.

"But the biggest drama didn't go on out front, at all," remarked our own particular sophomore, afterward. "It was behind the scenes, between the acts."

"And what was that?"

"Oh didn't you hear? One of the pirates ran another pirate's sword right through his hand. Just think, it might have been his eye—or even his head! I guess they were in a hurry—you know how pirates WOULD be, just coming off stage, like that. The curtain had just gone down, when somebody came running into the wing and cried, 'Get a doctor quick! A boy is bad hurt.'

"So we all ran out and there was that little pirate with a bright red scarf around his sandy hair and his face looking pale even through the freckles and grease paint. His hand wasn't bloody, but he kindo' staggered and sat down on a chair that was handy. Then we all just were quiet and stared. The wooden sword had gone in and broken off the back of his hand bulged where the point stuck up. I stood right close to keep him from falling, if he should faint - but I guess he wouldn't have. He didn't even whimper. Only looked queer and said, 'It hurts.'

"The janitor took a look. He said, 'Put him in my car, boys. I'll take him to the doctor with that right away.'

"'Get some water,' said one of the lady teachers. 'He's fainting.'

"But the kid opened his eyes and answered quick, 'No—don't! I haven't. I'm all right—go on with the show!'

"Wasn't that a brave speech for a little junior high boy? GO ON WITH THE SHOW! So we did—and in the second act we all felt like old troupers. I'll bet you could even tell it, in the audience! Gee, it was thrilling. 'The show must go on!' I wouldn't have missed it for anything!"

(For those who wonder—the boy's hand is doing fine. I do not know the lad, but our sophomore reports that the wound is healing nicely.)

Food Czar Davis Wants to Keep Farm Prices From Upward Jump

WASHINGTON—Inflationist farm leaders had hopes that Food Czar Chester Davis might be amenable to pressure on behalf of higher farm prices. But they got a rough shock at a White House meeting attended by Davis, the president, Secretary of Agriculture Wickard and the chiefs of four farm organizations.

Davis let it be known in no uncertain terms that he wasn't going to take dictation from anybody except the president. There had been skepticism about this because of Davis's close tie-in with the American Farm Bureau Federation.

However, the food czar dispelled such misgivings during an exchange with Farm Bureau boss Ed O'Neal and James Patton, president of the National Farmers Union. O'Neal, the caliph of the inflationist farm lobby, was demanding that Davis be given "full and complete" powers over farm prices.

"Mr. Davis can't function effectively if his hands are tied by the OPA, Mr. President," O'Neal said. "He should have broad discretionary authority with respect to prices."

The Farm Bureau leader didn't bother to add that neither could Davis function effectively if he were under pressure from the Farm Bureau and the lobby pushing farm price inflation. However, the two-fisted Patton intervened.

"I'm for giving Mr. Davis all the authority he needs," Patton interrupted, "but with one reservation. I would like to have it understood that he not use his authority to boost farm prices to inflationary levels. I realize that the prices of some commodities are too low and need adjustment, but we simply have got to draw the line somewhere. Otherwise labor will demand wage increases because of higher living costs and we'll be on the highroad to uncontrolled inflation before we know it."

Food Czar Promises.

YOU DON'T have to worry about me doing anything like that, Jim," Davis assured him. "I see eye to eye with you on the question of farm prices. They must be kept from rising, and I'm going to do all in my power to keep them from rising."

This was a direct shot at O'Neal, but it didn't faze the Farm Bureau chief. He turned right around and gave the president a big sales talk for the Bankhead bill, which would greatly increase farm prices by super-imposing soil conservation and other farm benefit payments on parity ceilings.

O'Neal contended that many cotton and dairy farmers would be squeezed out by current parity ceilings.

"I had to do a lot of lobbying to get the Bankhead bill through congress," he grinned, inferring that all his hard work would be wasted if the president vetoed the bill.

The president made no comment, but evinced keen interest in a statement by Patton on the economic plight of the little "family farmer."

Patton asserted that these small farmers are the ones who would be "squeezed out" unless the government stopped the concentrating of food production on big well-equipped farms instead of making machinery, electric power and other facilities available to several million small farms. If this were done, Patton said, war food production could be almost doubled.

"You hear a lot of talk about the extinction of little business, because of the concentration of war contracts in a few big firms," Patton observed, "but the same kind of concentration is forcing thousands of small farms to the wall also."

The president agreed it was a serious situation, instructed Davis to confer with Patton on ways and means to increase the production facilities of family-type farms.

Millionaire "Broke."

NELSON ROCKEFELLER, coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, invited a group of colleagues and a brace of congressmen to lunch at the Occidental restaurant in Washington. Prices are not low at the Occidental, but nobody thought millionaire Rockefeller would have trouble meeting the bill.

When the waiter presented the check, however, Rockefeller took some bills from his wallet, then looked blank. He turned to Tom Dozier, a colleague in his office, and said, "Tom, could you lend me a couple of dollars?"

Dozier obliged. Days passed, and Dozier thought he had lost that two bucks. Finally, a fortnight later, a note came from Rockefeller, saying, "Sorry to have delayed so long. Here's that two dollars I borrowed."

Dozier is keeping the note as a memento of the time he bailed out a millionaire.

St. Peter vs. Ruml Plan.

DURING the Ruml plan debate, Republican Representative Noah Mason of Illinois argued, amid some spirited heckling by Representative Bob Doughton of North Carolina, that pay-as-you-go tax receipts would be a strong talking point with Saint Peter. He explained:

"I will say to Saint Peter when I reach the Pearly Gates: 'I have brought with me a receipted tax bill for every year that I was supposed to pay taxes down below. Unless you have got something else against Mason you have just to open up those pearly gates and let me in.' What else could St. Peter do but let me in? What could he say to me?"

"If he knew you were for the Ruml plan," interrupted Doughton, "he would say to you: 'Depart from me ye worker on iniquity, for I know ye not?'"

ERNIE PYLE — Roving Reporter

Confusing Mixture of Many Languages; Ernie Meets Such Interesting People.

SIDI-BEL-ABBES, Algeria—Our visit to the French Foreign Legion was made highly pleasant by a Legionnaire who is an Englishman—Sergt. John Whiteway.

Whiteway is not an adventurer at all; he is a normal kind of businessman.

Just after the last war he went to Paris to live. For 20 years he was the Paris representative for American refrigerator and radio companies. He married a French girl and they have three handsome children, the youngest of whom he has never seen although the child is now nearly 3.

When war seemed imminent in 1939, Whiteway felt he should fight for the country that had supported him for 20 years. He couldn't join the regular French army, so he joined the Foreign Legion. They fought through the fall of France, and then were shipped back to Algeria. And here Whiteway has been ever since.

It was tough going, the first few months, for a man of his maturity and intellect. But his business ability and office experience made him invaluable to the Legion, and he was soon put into administrative work at headquarters. Thus he has escaped most of the rigors and the deadly barracks life of the Legion.

When the Americans came, Whiteway was one of the few English-speaking people in the Legion. So he was immediately attached to American headquarters as a liaison man. He wears civilian clothes now, and it was he who brought us to Sidi-bel-Abbes.

Although Whiteway had been away only a month, his return was like a royal homecoming. Everywhere we went both soldiers and officers of the Legion saluted and stopped and shook hands and jabbered as though he'd been gone for years. Little French girls, whom he had been teaching English, came running down the street to kiss him. He seems to be one Englishman who has made the French like him.

WE WERE a happy party who visited the Legion. In addition to Sergeant Whiteway and myself, there were five American army officers. They were:

Lieut. Col. Egbert W. Cowan, who has served all over the world in the regular army and whose daughter Shirley is about to become a ferry pilot at home; Capt. Art Nillen, a boisterous dentist from Dallas, whose motto is "See your dentist every day and brush your teeth twice a year"; Lieut. Albert DesChenes, a young Boston doctor who speaks French, and well he might with a name like that; Lieut. Max Kuehnert of Chicago, who was America's best brick salesman before the war, and who still carried around his sales booklets of model brick homes; and Lieut. Leonard Bessman, a likeable Milwaukee lawyer who doesn't speak French but who has the virtue of continually trying to speak it.

Lenny and Max are both enthusiasts. Everything they see is wonderful. Lenny has been a Foreign Legion fan ever since he was a child, and we almost had to hold him to keep him from signing up right on the spot.

It was Lenny's efforts at French which endeared him to a Rumanian cavalry sergeant named Paul Baron Ecsedy de Csapo, who hung with us all day and wound up by almost tearfully pinning his most prized medal on Lennie's blouse, as a token of his esteem.

Max hit his stride when we dropped into a little bar patronized almost exclusively by the Legion. It is run by a man named Lucette Paume, a Swiss who spent 20 years in the Legion and is now retired. His wife and two children help him run the bar.

Max speaks German, and this is how it wound up—Max and the Swiss in one huddle talking German; Lieutenant DesChenes and the proprietor's daughters in another huddle speaking real French; Colonel Cowan with a little group around him telling about hunting elephants in Indo-China; Art Nillen standing in the doorway shouting "Zid, yalla, you little—" at all the passing Arab kids; Lenny and the sergeant in another huddle speaking pidgin and making motions, and me sitting all alone in a corner ordering my breakfast in Spanish over and over to myself.

Breakfast-words happen to be the only Spanish I know, and damned if I wasn't going to talk some kind of foreign language amidst all that international sewing circle, even if I had to keep ordering hyopthetical breakfasts all afternoon. Thus the day passed. Vive le Legion Etranger!
